"His Majesty understands the interest which the National Committee, unanimously, has shown in General Radescu's personal letters addressed to His Majesty on 6 December 1949. His Majesty understands, likewise the timidity of General Radescu in presenting this letter to the National Committee; but, without infringing on the freedom of action of the National Committee, His Majesty does not understand, why the National Committee does not attend to precise, important, concrete and very urgent matters rather than concentrating on certain affirmations no matter how serious, but which possibly and even probably are only simple personal impressions not supported by anything real and objective, as the reserved attitude of General Radescu toward the National Committee, seems to prove an attitude of reserve which His Majesty regrets that the President did not adopt from the beginning."
